PRESIDENT'S CORNER:

Why Yuba-Sutter Farm Bureau Members Should Vote No on Prop 50

Written by Brian Greathouse, YSFB President

You have most likely seen the “No on Prop 50” signs along the highways and roads in the region. This is because California’s Proposition 50 would have significant consequences for Yuba and Sutter Counties. This proposal would redraw district boundaries in a way that places our counties into districts with large urban and suburban populations, areas with different priorities, challenges, and values.

Agriculture is the backbone of the Yuba-Sutter economy. Our farmers and ranchers provide food, fiber, and jobs locally, state-wide, and nationally. We continue our work while we see constant changes in regulations, increased input costs and low payment for our crops. A lot of those are impacted by lawmakers and voters with little to no connection or understanding of how food is grown. Local representation is essential to making sure that agriculture is understood and defended in Sacramento. Proposition 50 threatens that representation.

If Prop 50 passes, Yuba and Sutter would be included in districts where agriculture is a small fraction of the overall population. These new districts would be centered around Democratic-leaning urban hubs, where issues like water supply, land use, and regulatory burdens are viewed through a lens far removed from farm fields and orchards. That means the voices of farmers and ranchers here could easily be drowned out by interests that don’t understand the realities of production agriculture.

Just imagine; Live Oak, a community built on farming, orchards, and local business, could be placed in the same district as areas that touch the San Francisco Bay. We share little in common with those urban centers when it comes to daily life, economic drivers, or community priorities. Our water use, land management, and rural infrastructure concerns are vastly different from those of Bay Area cities. It doesn’t make sense to group agricultural communities like ours with urban regions that have no real connection to or understanding of rural California.

This isn’t about party politics, it’s about ensuring that the people who represent us know the importance of agriculture and the challenges we face. Our local industries depend on fair water allocation, sensible regulations, and policies that encourage growth and innovation. Losing meaningful representation would put all of that at risk.

Voting NO on Proposition 50 protects the voice of Yuba-Sutter agriculture. It ensures that our communities are not pushed to the sidelines in favor of political agendas that don’t reflect our values or economic realities.

For the future of our farms, ranches, and rural way of life, Farm Bureau urges all members to stand together and vote NO on Prop 50. 🌾

WE ARE STRONGER TOGETHER—AND TOGETHER, WE CAN PROTECT FARMERS AND RANCHERS!

We need your help to grow our voice. Encourage friends, neighbors, and colleagues to join the Yuba-Sutter Farm Bureau.

We stand up for farmers in Sacramento and Washington, D.C.
We defend private property rights and make sure you have the tools you need to farm.
We connect local farmers on the issues that matter most.

Leadership Class Travels Out of State to Widen Perspective

Courtesy of CAFB AgAlert, Written by Tharvin Gill and John Tamayo

As part of the Leadership Farm Bureau program, our Leadership Farm Bureau class traveled to Arkansas and Tennessee last month as part of our out-of-state visit. The objective was to meet and interact with farmers, ranchers and Arkansas Farm Bureau members to get fresh insight into agriculture outside California. The three-day trip also allowed us to see how Farm Bureau plays a critical role in making a positive impact in our industry, whether through outreach, financing or advocacy.

During our first day, we visited Mike Freeze, owner of Keo Fish Farm in Keo, Arkansas. With 1,000 acres of hybrid striped bass and grass carp, Keo Fish Farm is one of the largest fish farms in Arkansas. Mike showed us around his facility and how they raise fish. It was interesting to hear that the water he uses for fish is transferred into a nearby canal so that rice farmers can use it for irrigation.

It was surprising to hear that Arkansas farmers have little to no water regulation and that they can use as much water as they like due to its abundance in the aquifer and that their only cost is in pumping the water.

We also met with Jennifer Craig at the Arkansas Farm Bureau headquarters in Little Rock. Jennifer, along with John McMinn and Rachel Tidwell, gave us an overview of Arkansas agriculture, the issues they face and financial opportunities for Arkansas Farm Bureau members.

It was great learning about the different commodities throughout the state and what Farm Bureau is doing on behalf of its members, including Farm Bureau Bank, which is available to members. It was fascinating to hear about the services that Farm Bureau Bank provides to farmers and the support it gives them to grow their operations.

We wrapped up the day with a visit to Flying C Ranch in Conway with owners Michael Lee and Leanna Clark. Flying C Ranch is one of the few ranches in Arkansas that show consumers where their food comes from and how important agritourism is for our industry.

Leanna and Michael said all their steers are raised comfortably on their ranch in a low-stress environment. This is a life-long passion for them, especially for Leanna, who wants to help maintain a positive image of beef production. We were awestruck seeing their operation, how they educate the public about the importance of agricultural production and their commitment to agriculture.

On Day 2, our LFB class began with a visit to Eagle Seeds LLC in Weiner, which grows and distributes a wide variety of grains and seeds, including soybeans, corn and rice. Some of the company's major clients are familiar names such as Kellogg's and Anheuser-Busch. It was fascinating to see the scale of its operation and hear about how the business began and grew to where it is today.

Following our trip to Eagle Seeds, we traveled to the Northeast Rice Research and Extension Center, or NERREC, in Poinsett County, near Fayetteville. We learned the center's mission is to develop and promote innovative, efficient rice production practices using genetically diverse and adapted cultivars. Its goal is to maximize profitability for Arkansas rice producers while promoting sustainable agricultural practices.

Key research areas include improving water-use efficiency, evaluating practices related to soil health and carbon sequestration, and integrating advanced technologies such as artificial intelligence and robotics in rice production.

The center sits on 600 acres of Henry silt loam—known as “white soils”—making it the only Arkansas agricultural experiment station site focused specifically on unique soils found in the Arkansas Delta. It was especially interesting to compare the similarities and differences between agricultural practices in Arkansas and California. One major takeaway was the stark difference in irrigation methods and water availability between the two states. Next, we met Jason McGee of HCM Farm Partners in Cherry Valley. McGee shared his journey as a first-generation farmer, discussing the challenges he's overcome and the path he's taken to achieve success. Hearing his story was incredibly motivating and offered a powerful example of resilience and innovation in modern agriculture.

We then visited Stiles Farms, a fourth-generation peanut and cotton operation in the Arkansas Delta. Owned and operated by Kerry and Ramey Stiles, the farm is part of a growing movement in Lee County where cotton producers are integrating peanuts into their crop rotations. This shift has been supported by Delta Peanut's construction of a buying point in Marianna that serves local peanut growers.

Tharvin Gill

John Tamayo

The Stiles family offered their perspectives on the benefits of peanut production and discussed the future of peanuts and cotton in Arkansas. Touring their farm gave us an on-the-ground view of peanut cultivation, which is novel for those of us from the West, where peanut farming is far less common. It was rewarding to learn about new crops and production methods.

Later, we toured the McClendon, Mann and Felton Cotton Gin in Marianna. For many in our class, this was the first time seeing a cotton gin in operation. The facility runs 24/7 starting in October and pauses only for Christmas. We were amazed to learn that the gin was recognized by Bayer and Deltapine for ginning the most cotton in the U.S. during the 2024 season—an impressive 242,706 bales. The scale and efficiency of the operation were truly eye-opening. While cotton is grown in limited parts of California, few of us have seen the full cotton processing chain in person.

In Tennessee, we toured the Port of Memphis, one of the largest inland ports in the United States. Randy Richardson, vice president of port and industrial properties and executive director of the Memphis and Shelby County Port Commission, walked us through the history and economic importance of the port, which includes three major slack-water harbors: Pidgeon Industrial Harbor, McKellar Lake Harbor and Wolf River Harbor. These harbors serve two key industrial parks—Pidgeon Industrial Park and President's Island, both essential for waterborne and multimodal transport operations.

The Port of Memphis generates an impressive $6.25 billion in total annual economic output, supports 5,361 direct jobs and 8,494 indirect jobs, and contributes approximately $71.7 million in annual tax revenue. The tour offered an incredible perspective on the role of infrastructure in agriculture and trade, especially in connecting regional products to national and global markets.

These experiences inspired us to return to the Golden State and be even stronger advocates for California farmers and ranchers.

Tharvin Gill is vice president and relationship manager for the Western region of Conterra Ag Capital. He also serves on the board of directors of the Ag Lenders Society of California.

John Tamayo is an irrigation salesman for Rain for Rent in Imperial County. He is also on the California Farm Bureau Young Farmers & Ranchers state committee representing District 10.

FLOOD INSURANCE Tip

MOST HOMEOWNER'S POLICIES EXCLUDE FLOOD COVERAGE.

You've heard the phrase, "Never trust the tricky Yuba."

Flood insurance is a vital policy to protect your farm and personal property. In the early 1980's, Yuba & Sutter counties began providing flood insurance through the National Flood Insurance Program, underwritten by the Federal government. Over time, private companies, like ours, began to manage the paperwork for coverage and claims.

Depending on your property location, a modest premium can provide coverage from flood risk. For a free evaluation of your current policy, and a free coverage quote, call us, or stop by our office -- we're located in the Yuba-Sutter Farm Bureau building!

4-H Youth Are Beyond Ready: Sutter-Yuba Joins National Celebration of Leadership, Learning, and Service

Courtesy of Sutter-Yuba 4-H, Written by Rene McCrory, Mary Zoller, and Matt Rodriguez

From fairgrounds to classrooms, community gardens to robotics labs, 4-H youth in Sutter and Yuba Counties are proving they're not just ready for the future – they're Beyond Ready. During National 4-H Week, celebrated October 5–11, 2025, local clubs will share how 4-H equips young people with the skills, confidence, and resilience to lead in a world full of opportunity and change.

As America's largest youth development organization, 4-H empowers 6 million young people nationwide with hands-on learning experiences through clubs, camps, school programs, and community events. Through the Beyond Ready initiative, 4-H will help prepare 10 million youth for work and life by 2030. In Sutter and Yuba Counties, 4-H youth are making the best better by developing leadership, service, and career-ready skills.

This past year, local 4-H members showcased their talents and dedication at the Yuba-Sutter Fair, where livestock and welding projects earned top honors, including multiple first-place ribbons and Best of Show. Members also participated in signature events such as County 4-H Presentation Day, where they built critical public speaking and communication skills; 4-H Craft Day, which offered hands-on creativity for families; Farm Day, where youth educated students about agriculture and 4-H; and the End of Year Party, which celebrated a successful program year with all members and families.

Community engagement was another highlight of the year, with members proudly participating in the Veterans Day Parade, the Marysville and Browns Valley Christmas Parades. Fundraising efforts, including the Tractor Supply Co. Paper Clover Campaign and Hallwood 4-H Club's Spaghetti Dinner, supported scholarships and leadership development opportunities for youth across the counties.

Embryology, and Water Wizards to leadership experiences like the County Ambassador Program, 4-H members are discovering their spark and building lifelong skills such as teamwork, resilience, creativity, and public speaking.

"At a time when young people are navigating more uncertainty than ever, 4-H offers them a place to grow, lead, and find their spark," said Jill Bramble, President & CEO of National 4-H Council. "Through 4-H, youth gain real-world skills and experiences to help them become confident leaders who are resilient, confident, and Beyond Ready for the future."

During National 4-H Week, local members, alumni, volunteers, and supporters will wear green, participate in service projects, and share their stories on social media using #4HBeyondReady and #National4HWeek.

Yuba-Sutter YF&R Members Tour Montna Farms

Written by Ciera Mannan, YSFB Program Coordinator

The Yuba-Sutter Young Farmers & Ranchers had the opportunity to tour Montna Farms, gaining an up-close look at rice harvest in action. Members stepped into the fields during harvest, saw equipment at work, and gained a firsthand understanding of the effort it takes to bring in a successful crop.

Montna Farms, a family-owned operation, primarily grows short grain rice used for sushi, farming about 4,000 acres across the Sacramento Valley. In addition to growing their crop, Montna also dries and stores all of the rice they produce, making their operation fully integrated from field to storage.

The tour was hosted by Jon Munger, President, and Katherine Rosser, CFO, who shared insight into Montna's operation and their long-standing commitment to sustainability and conservation. The farm has been recognized for integrating wildlife-friendly practices into its rice fields, providing critical habitat for migratory birds and waterfowl while maintaining a strong, productive rice-growing operation.

The tour was both educational and engaging, giving YF&R members valuable insight into one of the Sacramento Valley's leading rice farms. Experiences like this highlight the importance of connecting young agricultural professionals with the operations that shape our local community and industry.

Rice Levee, Road Edge, and Ag Corridor Program Announcement

Courtesy of Cal Rice News

California Waterfowl Association (CWA) will soon be soliciting applications for the Rice Levee, Road Edge, and Ag Corridor Program. This program is funded by the California Department of Fish and Wildlife, through the Nesting Bird Habitat Incentive Program, which pays private landowners 80 cents per linear foot for the management of their internal rice levees or road edges for upland nesting bird species (Mallard, Gadwall, and Pheasant). To participate in this program, vegetation on rice levees and roads must be left from the previous growing season. Enrolled areas must be left undisturbed until July 15th. To find out more about the program or to apply, visit the California Waterfowl Association's website.

The application period will be open from October 13th to November 30th, 2025. Applications will be ranked, and successful applicants will be notified by December 19th, 2025.

Exploring Agriculture Up Close: Yuba-Sutter Farm Bureau's Farm Day 2025

Written by Ciera Mannan, YSFB Program Coordinator

The Yuba-Sutter Fairgrounds came alive on September 26th as more than 1,900 third-grade students gathered for the 20th annual Farm Day, hosted by the Yuba-Sutter Farm Bureau. For many students, it was their first time stepping into the world of agriculture, and the day delivered a lasting impression.

Classrooms were replaced with hands-on stations as local farmers, ranchers, businesses, FFA members, and 4-H clubs shared their knowledge. Nearly 50 presentations introduced students to everything from livestock care and crop production to farm equipment and conservation. Each stop gave students a chance to interact directly with people who work in agriculture every day.

Students left buzzing with excitement after visiting a variety of booths and demonstrations. Highlights included meeting and petting the horses at the Yuba County Search and Rescue booth, seeing the spray helicopter up close, making butter with local FFA chapters, watching a stock dog demonstration, and exploring the YCUSD Nutrition Services farmers market. These memorable activities highlighted just how many different skills and careers are connected to agriculture and rural communities.

Healthy snacks were donated by Blue Diamond Almonds,

Pacific Coast Producers, California Walnuts, and Sunsweet, which helped fuel students during a busy morning of learning. Behind the scenes were the efforts of local FFA chapters from Wheatland-Bear River, and Yuba City Charter, with support from AgWest Farm Credit and the Yuba County Agricultural Department.

A huge thank you to this year's sponsors: AgWest Farm Credit and Yuba Water Agency served as our Diamond Sponsors. Grange Co-Op joined us as a Gold Sponsor. Silver Sponsors included Big Time Farming, Colusa Indian Community Council, Express Employment, Pacific Coast Producers, and Taylor Bros Farms.

Our Friends of Farm Day Sponsors were Bear River Supply, Farm West Insurance Services, Grow West, Recology, River Valley Community Bank, and Sutter Land Management.

Together, these sponsors and volunteers ensured that every student had the chance to learn, explore, and connect with agriculture in a hands-on way. By the end of the day, students walked away with a stronger understanding of the role agriculture plays in their daily lives. Farm Day remains one of the most meaningful ways to connect local youth with the people and practices that sustain our community. We can't wait for Farm Day 2026! 🌾

Farm Leader Shares Thoughts on Balancing Work, Life

Courtesy of CAFB AgAlert, Written by Shaun Crook, First Vice President, California Farm Bureau

I'm a second-generation logger and third generation in agriculture. Have you introduced yourself in a similar way? Ever thought about why you did so or the importance of it? We are often defined by our occupations. This isn't necessarily good or bad, but what are the ramifications?

For most of us in production agriculture, farming is not just a job but a way of life. It is an amazing opportunity that God has entrusted us with. But if you are like me, finding balance is a constant struggle and a battle I've probably lost more than I have won.

I apologize if you expected forest management wisdom in this commentary, but I wanted to take this opportunity to talk about the struggles we don't usually want to talk about.

With all that we produce in California, time is still our most precious commodity. I've known for a long time that quality time together is my wife's love language, as that is what is most important to her. Yet I have been guilty of sacrificing my presence with my family for working long hours in the woods, taking on too much extra work—and yes, even for Farm Bureau.

With all that we produce in California, time is still our most precious commodity. I've known for a long time that quality time together is my wife's love language, as that is what is most important to her. Yet I have been guilty of sacrificing my presence with my family for working long hours in the woods, taking on too much extra work—and yes, even for Farm Bureau.

The Bible talks a lot about the value and importance of hard work and service to others, and I agree completely. But we should also be mindful of the sacrifices our loved ones make because of our decisions and because we "have to work".

In agriculture, "have to work" is often unavoidable. Many times, the livelihood of our livestock or crops is completely dependent on our presence, and that means we have to work. But what about the times when things on the farm aren't necessarily relying on our being there? Do we go to work anyway and miss that baseball game or performance at school? Our loved ones need us there more than we realize. And when we are there, are we really there or is our mind on the work that isn't getting done?

I guess I started to have this midlife crisis—even though at 47 years old, I realize I am past midlife and should have had this crisis at least seven years ago. When it comes to raising children, we have all heard "it goes fast," "don't blink" and a thousand other sayings. As an officially "old head," I can tell you those sayings are true.

I first ran for the state Farm Bureau office more than eight years ago. At that time, our oldest son hadn't started high school, and our youngest could barely throw a baseball. With a couple of blinks, Gregory is a college graduate working on the East Coast, and Walker is about to start his first year at Cal Poly. Velina went back to school and is about to complete her bachelor's degree. I couldn't be more proud of my family, but I do have regrets that I wasn't more present.

One huge change since we started this journey together is that my father passed away two and half years ago. Dad started our logging company and was in charge until the very end. He battled prostate cancer for about four years. He missed an appointment for a prostate screening test because he "had to work." By the time his cancer was diagnosed, it was advancing to Stage 4. While I can't be certain he would be here today if he had made it to that appointment, I can be certain that everything at work that day would have been fine if he had missed work to go to the doctor.

The other huge part of all this is we have bad habits of not talking about succession planning. When our patriarch gets diagnosed with advanced cancer, we want to be positive and talking about how things will go without him doesn't seem appropriate. It feels too late at that point. But not talking about these things with our families does more harm than good. As hard as it is, someone must start the conversation. Our partners at Nationwide, with the Land as Your Legacy program, have great tools to help in this process. But someone must have the courage to start the conversation.

It's hard to separate life from work, but it is crucial for our well-being and state of mind to be present for our families. Do we live to work or work to live? Sometimes I must be reminded that being a logger is what I do and not always who I am. I want to first be remembered as a Christian, a husband and a father. Then I can be remembered as a logger. 🌲
